OHORONGO CROSSES BORDERS WITH FIRST BULK EXPORT TO ANGOLA

Ohorongo Cement (Pty) Ltd ensured a regular influx of foreign capital into Namibia, by having successfully exported the first bulk cement to the south of Angola on 12 March 2012.

The first bulk cement load was delivered by bulk tanker to Santa Clara, Angola.

The project promises a total tonnage of about 30,000 metric tons of cement to be exported until the end of 2012, which equates to approximately 1000 loads of bulk cement.

This is in agreement between Mr Benjamin Hauwanga (owner of BH Motorspares) and his customer, CFRL, Santa Clara. In the past, the availability of bulk cement was not readily available, but now Ohorongo has made history by making it available.

In the process Ohorongo is supporting SME's as part of its Logistics Strategy. The first load was delivered by Enkali Transport, a small family business, based in the North of Namibia.

This project forms part of Ohorongo's bigger plan to expand exports. The aim is to export approximately 350,000 metric tons annually.

Where Namibia had to import cement previously, the tables has been turned with Namibia now exporting cement to neighbouring countries.
